For Immediate Release

Economic Development funds technology training

February 25, 2008 - Westminster, MD - Beginning February 26, Carroll Technology Council (CTC) members will receive a new member benefit – free training. The Carroll County Department of Economic Development worked with the CTC to identify training that will help CTC member companies remain competitive. Courses will be offered as an exclusive member benefit in a 2008 Professional Development Series developed in conjunction with the Carroll Community College Miller Small Business Resource Center.

“We are providing this benefit to CTC members as a means to support the growing technology sector in Carroll County”, stated Denise Beaver, Deputy Director of Economic Development. The courses will offer advanced skills training for individuals who have mastered the basics, but need to know intermediate to expert user tips in courses such as Windows VISTA, Business Applications for QuickBooks Pro and Adobe Photoshop Applications in Marketing”.

CTC President Ron Harrington said “These practical training programs are aimed at improving the skills necessary for members to become more effective in business. Training is but one example of the many benefits that come with CTC membership and a good reason to join for those who are not yet members.”

Incorporated as Carroll County’s premier technology organization in 2004, the Carroll Technology Council strives to serve its members, local government and the community at large by working to advance technology awareness and development in Carroll County.
